The Emmys red carpet gets underway Sunday at 6pm ET, before the ceremony kicks off at 8pm ET.

The obvious winners and losers are those to be revealed in 27 categories during the show hosted by Cedric the Entertainer. But there's more at stake than personal victories, and yardsticks of success or failure beyond trophies.

Streaming services are poised for a triumphant night that will cast further shade on the status of broadcast networks, including the big three ABC, CBS and NBC, and once-dominant cable channels such as HBO and Showtime.

This year, about 500 nominees and guests will gather under a glammed-up tent in downtown L.A., with COVID-19 precautions including a vaccine requirement and testing.

There are big names among the presenters, including Angela Bassett, Michael Douglas, Dolly Parton, and Awkwafina, but at least one star, Jennifer Aniston, was candid about staying away because of virus concerns.

For the first time in Emmy history, the top three nominated shows came from streaming platforms.

Netflix's The Crown and Disney's The Mandalorian each nabbed 24 nominations.

TED LASSO NABS 20 NOMINATIONS

Apple TV+'s breakout comedy series Ted Lasso has nabbed the platform 20 Emmy nominations this year.

Among the show's nominations are Outstanding Comedy Series and Outstanding Lead Actor for star Jason Sudeikis.

HBO AND NETFLIX LEAD NOMINATIONS

HBO, along with its streaming service HBO Max, led Emmy nominations this year with 130 nods.

Netflix followed close behind with 129.

Disney+ came in third with 71 nominations, and NBC and Apple TV+ rounded out the top 5 with 46 and 37 respectively.

WHAT IS NOMINATED AT THIS YEAR'S EMMYS?

This year's biggest nominees include several longtime TV favorites like The Crown, The Handmaid's Tale, Black-ish, and Saturday Night Live.

However, this year's list of nominees also includes several notable newcomers.

The Flight Attendant, Hacks, WandaVision, and Ted Lasso are all up to awards as well.

CEDRIC THE TED LASSO IMPERSONATOR

Cedric The Entertainer tapped into his inner Ted Lasso to promote his upcoming gig as host of The Emmys.

It's gonna be a good time. Winners are winners, and losers aren't losers. Winners are just people who haven't won.

"When the music starts playing, wrap it up," the comedian joked with a full costume and accent.

He added in the caption: "Never wear new shoes to a gunfight!! -Ced Lasso."

At this year's Emmys, both presenters and nominees will be able to choose from various luxury items and experiences to create their very own personalized swag bag.

Celebrity marketing company Backstage Creations' "Giving Suite," which has returned after a hiatus due to the pandemic, will be putting the gifts together.

The companies and brands - which range from sparkling cocktails to mental wellness retreats - pay up to $6,000 to place their product in pre-packed Emmy Awards gift bags and between $15,000 and $250,000 to reserve space in the suite, according to Forbes.

Products this year include Agni's Women's Health Box, Bocas Bali Luxury Water Villas, the Calm app, Empiria Fragrances, resort Espacio The Jewel of Waikiki, Four Seasons Resort Nevis, West Indies, Petrova Chocolates, Próspero Tequila and more.

Though the nominees will be the one giving speeches on stage, presenters are the ones that will read out the names of the night's winners.

Others who will be at the event and also are nominated include Anthony Anderson, Stephen Colbert, Kaley Cuoco, Michael Douglas, Billy Porter, MJ Rodriguez, Seth Rogen and Tracee Ellis Ross.
